SUNNY FINALE FOR WET WESTFEST

Alt-pop-rock-country chanteuse Amanda Rheume performs for an upbeat Westfest crowd enjoying the dying light of a beautiful sunny day that capped Westboro's somewhat soggy three-day spring festival. Gatineau police arson investigators are probing a fire that tore through a food truck operated by a charity that helps poor people.

"It's pretty odd for this to happen to an organization like this that helps people," said Gatineau Police Lt. Eric Savard of the early Sunday morning fire that preyed upon a chip wagon operated by la Soupière de l'Amitié de Gatineau. "They don't have a lot of money, they operate out of the generosity of people in the community."

Gatineau city councillor Joseph De Sylva, who recently became president of the charity's administrative board, said the fire is a significant blow as it helped the group with its school breakfast program and a program to help single moms with money for infant formula and diapers.

"Whoever did this is sure hurting a lot of kids. The money helps us to bring breakfast to young kids at 32 schools," said De Sylva. "I wish our laws were stronger to make people think before they do something like this."

De Sylva said the organization does have insurance, but he wasn't certain to what extent the damage would be covered. He said the group's goal is to have the chip wagon back up and running within a week to minimize its losses.

He said the food truck had been operating in the same location at a Rona parking lot at 777 Boul. de la Cité for at least 10 years.

Sex workers' legal battle lands in Supreme Court

Legal limbo. After six years, groups will have their say Thursday for and against Canada's prostitution laws

JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

Sex workers and their supporters rallied in various pockets across Canada over the week-end ahead of a Supreme Court of Canada hearing this week, which will mark "the end of a very long chapter" in the fight for prostitutes' safety, said a local advocacy group.

"Not the end of the war, but definitely a battle that's been lasting for about six years now," said Frederique Chabot, a member of Prostitutes of Ottawa/Gatineau, Work, Educate, Resist (POWER).

In 2007, three sex workers challenged the constitutionality of Canada's laws against prostitution and a Superior Court judge struck down three key elements, which sex workers say put their lives in danger.

The federal government appealed and the case went to the Ontario Court of Appeal, where judges struck down the bawdy house ban and decriminalized the living off the avails section, but upheld the section dealing with communication for the purpose of prostitution.

The federal government opposed that ruling and was granted leave to appeal status to Canada's highest court.

Those laws that have been held in legal limbo for years are the ones Chabot says puts sex workers in situations of "life and death."

"Basically what is in front of the courts is sex workers in Canada have to choose daily between taking safety measures, in the face of a lot of stigma that makes their lives less valuable to some people, and not going to jail," she said.

Prostitution advocates argue the communication law holds women back from assessing their potential clients and negotiating an agreement before the transaction takes place out of fear of getting arrested.

Chabot said working indoors is also safer because sex workers know their surroundings and can screen clients.

Criminal charges laid in gas pump crash that left one man injured

Police investigate at a Petro Canada on Fallowfield Road near Green Bank Road after a crash Saturday night that left one man hospitalized with hip injuries and another facing charges. Police say a 48-year-old man was driving his 2011 Toyota Camry in the parking lot of the gas station when he lost control of the vehicle, veered from one set of fuelling pumps to the next and struck a 2001 Dodge Dakota, which was being fuelled by a 57-year-old man. The truck then struck the man pumping gas and the fuel pump, which was sheered off its foundation. Safety features averted a gasoline spill, police said. Quang Do was charged with criminal negligence causing bodily harm and released. Police said alcohol was not a factor. MIKE CARROCCETTO/FOR METRO

Landfill gas plant to power homes with green energy

A new gas-to-energy plant promises to power 4,000 homes in Ottawa and divert 100,000 tonnes of green house gas as it began operations at the Lafleche landfill just outside the city in Moose Creek, Ont., Friday.

The plant will generate 4.2 megawatts of power and is the product of a public-private partnership between Hydro Ottawa's Energy Ottawa Inc. and Integrated Gas Recovery Services Inc. (IGRS).

"This partnership is a win-win scenario," said Bryce Conrad, President and CEO of Hydro Ottawa in a release. "We're turning a negative into a positive by harnessing landfill gas as a green energy source." GRAHAM LANKTREE/METRO

Torstar News Service revealed a memo was sent to all Liberal aides reminding them of proper decorum at Queen's Park.

"I just think it's good for people to know what we share as a common understanding of how we should dress. It's a professional environment and I just want to make sure that everybody understands what that means," Wynne said.

Still, the 60-year-old premier conceded that in her younger and more rebellious years, she went to the barricades for fashion rights. "There are people who taught me in high school who will be laughing because my first political action was to say women should be able to wear pants to school," she said.

"I know dressing norms change, but whatever point in time we have to have some kind of agreement about what's professional."

The memo to Liberal aides came as summer political interns are descending en masse to Queen's Park.

Mark Hutt found guilty of murder for killing his wife

Trial. Automatic life sentence to be handed out after only a few hours of deliberation

graham.lanktree@metronews.ca

It didn't take long for the jury to find "monster" Mark Hutt guilty of first-degree murder for leaving his wife Donna Jones to die in their basement for 11 days with third-degree burns after he scalded her with boiling water.

"Pay the piper now, you prick," shouted a member of Jones' friends and family, who were packed into an Ottawa courtroom Friday at 11 a.m. The jury was sent to deliberate Thursday evening and met for little more than an hour Friday morning before they reached a decision.

Their verdict means that Hutt, 36, faces an automatic sentence of life in prison with no chance of parole for 25 years.

"It's taken an enormous toll. It's such a negative impact for someone to die so young, so senselessly," said Derek Jones, the brother of 33-year-old Donna. "All she wanted to do was have a loving, caring family and this is what she got from an evil man."

Jones urged women in similar situations of abuse not to wait, but to get help as soon as they can. "There's lots of support networks out there," he said. "You are all good people, you just have a bad situation and there are lots of doors you can open and people will open for you to get through it, to move on."

In the courtroom, Justice Robert Maranger thanked the jury.

"This was a tough case. The things you saw were things you couldn't imagine you would see," he said.

Maranger cited a series of shocking photos of Donna Jones' injuries and testimony from medical specialists that revealed she had been shot 30 times with a pellet gun, had her nose broken and sustained a series of other injuries before her death and in the years she knew Hutt.

Sentencing for Hutt has been put off until June 25 so that victim impact statements from Jones' tight-knit group of friends and her family can be prepared.

Derek Jones, the brother of battered and murdered woman Donna Jones, raises his fist in victory after hearing a guilty verdict of first-degree murder against his sister's abuser, Mark Hutt. GRAHAM LANKTREE/METRO

6-year sentence for St. Paddy's Day manslaughter decried as 'excessive'

2011 brawl. Judge says Ben Taylor is an 'excellent prospect for rehabilitation' due to his family's support

graham.lanktree@metronews.ca

The family and lawyer of a young man found guilty of manslaughter for the stabbing death of Scott Ledoux expressed dismay as he was sentenced to six years in prison Friday.

"The sentence he received ... is a little excessive given his age and the circumstances," said Pat McCann, attorney for 20-year-old Ben Taylor, who attacked Ledoux in his home during a drunken St. Patrick's Day brawl in 2011.

Taylor was ordered to serve the remaining three years and nine months of his sentence after being held in custody since Ledoux's death.

"He will have to serve about another 18 to 20 months," said McCann as he left an Ottawa courtroom Friday, explaining that Taylor will serve half of the remaining time before being given a shot at parole.

Crown attorneys asked for an eight-year sentence, but given that Taylor was 18 at the time of the stabbing, Justice Charles Hackland said he showed leniency in sentencing. Previously, Taylor had been acquitted of second-degree murder by a jury. He has also been given a lifetime weapons prohibition.

"At the time he was being beaten about the head and face and was not in a position to consider his actions," said Hackland of the fight in Taylor's Orleans apartment when Ledoux, 22, attacked him after a day of drinking spun out of control.

Yet some of Taylor's relatives and supporters could not cope with the prospect of seeing him imprisoned.

"I've had it with this. It's a f---ing joke this justice system," shouted one man as he stormed off from McCann's meeting with Taylor's family and friends following the verdict.

Canada celebrates decade of same-sex marriage

Ten years ago, their unprecedented wedding stood for hope, equality and inclusion.

A decade later, Michael Leshner and Michael Stark — Canada's first legally married same-sex couple — believe the battle to have their union recognized by the courts has made it easier for today's lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender Canadians to feel accepted.

"Once you have marriage you have full equality. That was won that day," said Leshner.

The pair's quick civil ceremony in Toronto came just hours after Ontario's Court of Appeal pronounced the Canadian law on traditional marriage unconstitutional on June 10, 2003.

While Ontario was the first to legally recognize same-sex marriage, many other provinces followed soon after. Two years later, the federal government legalized same-sex marriage countrywide with the gender-neutral Civil Marriage Act. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Journalism. U.S. state snooping story prompts debate on source protection

A scandal over state snooping on journalists in the United States is prompting media-watchers to consider new techniques to protect sources.

Anonymity of sources is considered sacrosanct among journalists and essential to their safety, reputation, and ability to act as public whistle-blowers.

But journalists are lagging behind when it comes to protecting sources in the digital era, critics say.

"There is a general lack of awareness (among journalists) about what ubiquitous surveillance looks like," said Jonathan Stray, who teaches at Columbia University. Everything from the websites you visit, the calls you make, and even your phone location are logged somewhere, Stray said. The same applies to reporters. Whistle-blowers are at particular risk. A week ago, The New Yorker unveiled Strongbox — a secure way for people to leak information to them.

Defence survey to shed light on silent crime

Results of an anonymous survey to be released in the fall by National Defence will shed more light on the extent of military sexual assault, including what has been called the silent crime of male-on-male rape.

Almost 68,000 troops, 86 per cent of them men, were asked last year to voluntarily complete the Canadian Forces Workplace Harassment Survey. It asks their gender, years of service and rank, along with 100 questions ranging from personal harassment to whether they've been raped. It's the first such survey since 1998. Results could provide valuable insight into the extent of sexual violence in the Canadian military — an issue that former soldiers and others say is rarely reported. The extent to which men are sexually assaulted by other men is even more cloaked in silence, they say.

After the speech. Tens of thousands pack into Taksim Square; thousands more flood Ankara's central square

In a series of increasingly beligerent speeches to cheering supporters Sunday, Turkey's prime minister launched a verbal attack on the tens of thousands of anti-government protesters who flooded the streets for a 10th day, accusing them of creating an environment of terror.

Recep Tayyip Erdogan made the most inflammatory of his speeches as he arrived in the capital, Ankara. Erdogan belittled the protesters, again calling them "capulcu," the Turkish word for loot-ers or vandals. He made his speech in Ankara on an open-top bus, which then drove into the city in a motorcade.

Anti-government protesters have turned Erdogan's label of them as "capulcu" into mocking slogans, printing stickers with the word, scrawling it on their tents and uploading music videos onto social network sites.

China. Nobel laureate's wife calls brother's jailing vendetta against family

A court sentenced the brother-in-law of China's imprisoned Nobel Peace Prize winner Liu Xiaobo to 11 years in prison Sunday — an unusually harsh punishment for a business dispute that Xiaobo's wife immediately decried as a vendetta against the whole family.

The court in suburban Beijing found Liu Hui guilty of fraud in a real estate dispute and issued the sentence after a brief hearing.

Liu Xia, the defendant's sister and the Nobel laureate's wife who is herself under house arrest but who was allowed to attend the trial, wept as she briefly stood and spoke to reporters outside a car that was bringing her home from the hearing.

Family members and their supporters have said the prosecution of Liu Hui is meant as further punishment of the Nobel laureate's family and is intended to intimidate other political activists.

iRadio music service, iOS update expected at Apple conference

San Francisco. New look for iPhones, iPads could be most radical design change to mobile software since 2007

Apple is expected to reveal a digital radio service and changes to the software behind iPhones and iPads on Monday as the company opens its annual conference for software developers.

Apple hasn't said what it will unveil at the Worldwide Developers Conference in San Francisco. But the major announcements are expected during Monday's keynote presentation. Last year, Apple used the conference to announce its own mapping service, better integration with social networks and improvements to virtual assistant Siri. It also announced

- Observers think Apple will debut a music-streaming service dubbed iRadio, and that it will be most similar to Pandora, an advertising-supported service that plays songs at random within certain genres for free.

- However, the Apple service is expected to feature a seamless way for listeners to purchase songs through iTunes.

thinner MacBooks with high-resolution screens. The conference runs through Friday.

This year, Apple is expected to show off a simplified look on iPhones and iPads. If the speculation is correct, it would be the most radical design change since the iPhone made its debut in 2007, showing consumers that phones could do much more than make calls and exchange messages.

This week's event comes at an important time for Apple. The company's stock price has fallen amid concerns that another breakthrough product isn't imminent. Although CEO Tim Cook has said people shouldn't expect new products until the fall, Apple is likely to preview how future products will function in its unveiling of new services and features.

Monday's highlight is expected to be an updated version of iOS, the software that runs iPhones, iPads and iPod Touches. It will be called iOS 7 and will come with new devices expected to go on sale this fall. Owners of recent models such as last fall's iPhone 5 will likely be eligible for free upgrades.

Federal agency stops investigating deadly anthrax

Canada's food regulator has stopped getting involved in cases of anthrax, a disease that can kill cattle, bison, other grazing animals and, in rare cases, people.

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency says it will no longer investigate and quarantine anthrax-infected farms, collect samples for testing, vaccinate livestock or oversee and help pay for the cost of disposing animals that die of the disease.

New rules that went into effect this spring say livestock producers, with the help of private veterinarians, are expected to take responsibility for preventing and dealing with anthrax.

Anthrax is caused by naturally occurring bacteria in spores in soil. The spores can become active during hot weather that follows heavy rains or flooding. Animals that ingest the spores can get sick and die very quickly. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Work perk. Some firms let employees buy and sell their vacation time

Want more time off work to hang out at the beach? Need a little cash and have vacation days to spare?

Some U.S. companies are allowing their workers to buy and sell vacation time, a perk that gives workers more flexibility in managing their time off.

The novel approach might help employees buy some extra days off to take the trip of a lifetime or spend more time with a newborn. Co-workers could sell off unused days to get some extra money.

"When times are a little tight, this benefit really doesn't cost a lot of extra money to employers to provide," said Julie Stich, research director for the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans. "It's offered by more forward thinking or flexible-type employers." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Casino waitresses resist toeing the line on high heels

Cheryl Haase has been serving cocktails for more than two decades, and the 52-year-old waitress says she has a list of foot ailments to prove it.

The miles she has walked carrying trays of drinks through the Foxwoods Resort Casino in high heels have sent her over the years to chiropractors and podiatrists for injections to treat inflammation.

Now she and a union representing her fellow cocktail waitresses at the U.S.'s largest casino are fighting for the servers to wear shoes of their own choosing. Many have worked at the casino since it opened in 1992, and some see proposed new requirements as a bid to push them out and make way for younger workers.

"Most of us girls have been here for 20 years, 15 years. This job has really done a number on our feet and they know it," Haase said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Crowdsourcing app helps Venezuelans get around shortages of food, supplies

A mobile application called Abasteceme, or Supply Me, has taken off in food shortage-plagued Venezuela. It relies on users to notify one another about where certain sought-after items can be purchased. ABASTECEME.COM

Harried Venezuelans who devote hours scouring supermarkets for increasingly scarce food basics and toilet paper have just received some digital help thanks to a young software developer.

A free application for mobile devices written by Jose Augusto Montiel lets people notify one another where flour, sugar, milk, cooking oil and toilet paper are for sale. It has been downloaded more than 12,000 times.

Abasteceme, or Supply Me, is Android-based and relies on Google Maps for geolocation. It leverages what is known in the tech world as crowdsourcing with users notifying one another where a certain product is for sale.

Basic items such as wheat flour and butter have gone missing on store shelves throughout Venezuela. Economists blame government-imposed price control, while President Nicolas Maduro says greedy merchants are hoarding goods.

"From what I've seen so far it's mostly toilet paper, followed by flour," Montiel said about what gets posted most.

The 21-year-old chemical engineering student in the western city of Maracaibo said most of Abasteceme's users were in Caracas when he first made the app available on the Google Play website on May 29.

"But now it has spread all over the country," he said.

He said it's been overwhelming keeping the server that hosts the application from crashing and attending to users, who he says are clamouring for him to include more products.

Montiel said he also deletes a lot of entries when people notify him that supplies of a certain product have sold out.

- "I'm also working to develop it for the BlackBerry as a lot of people have them in Venezuela," he said.

- He said he wants to work on an iPhone version but can't afford a Mac to do that. He said he's earning just enough to cover costs.

COUNCIL TALKS, PUBLIC WAITS

For the arguments against Mayor Jim Watson's proposed insistence that any new casino be built at Rideau Carleton Raceway or nowhere at all, you could have asked the mayor himself last year.

"My preference would be that it be in the downtown, close to transit, near the hotels, convention centre," Watson told reporters last April, stressing the importance of walkability and convenience for gamblers. "That's what makes a casino successful."

The last thing Watson in 2012 wanted to do was plunk a gaming emporium out in the boonies: "When we have convention delegates in the downtown core going to the convention centre and staying at downtown hotels it becomes a bit of a destination challenge to get out to Scotiabank Place or out to Rideau Carleton Raceway."

The ground has shifted since then, and now the mayor's touting his proposal as the only way to keep the racetrack and its jobs viable, since the province has shown no interest in letting it keep its slot machines once a new casino is up and running elsewhere. (Oddly, some otherwise reluctant councillors voted last fall in favour of throwing in with OLG for a new casino as the only way to save the track.)

The further-flung location may not be the best strategy for another of Watson's oft-stated goals, keeping some of the quarter billion taken in by Gatineau's Lac Leamy Casino on this side of the river.

Still, convenience isn't everything, and from some points of view, it's one of the worst things.

The Centretown Community Health Centre, which opposes a new casino generally, identified a downtown casino as the most efficient way to ramp up harm to those who can least absorb it.

"We know that of the vulnerable populations that suffer from problem gambling, such as seniors, such as aboriginals, such as lower income, they are well represented in the downtown area," said the CCHC's Jeff Morrison, "so if you were to put a casino in that location, you're just encouraging more vulnerable populations to access it."

If getting the casino out of downtown is one easy way to mitigate the damage it can do, Morrison has a list of other suggestions, like not serving alcohol everywhere in the casino, having ATMs on-site or staying open around the clock.

Even letting in a little daylight, he said, could help: "You go to any casino pretty much anywhere in the world, and you'll notice they never have windows because they don't want you to know what time of day it is."

Some of these measures sound distinctly unlikely. For OLG, their private sector partner and municipal and provincial governments, revenue is job one, and possibly jobs two and three as well. The original point of OLG's entire modernization exercise was to increase Ontario's gambling take by $1.3 billion a year.

And the suggestion box isn't exactly open at this point. There's been a grand total of one meeting so far at which the public could comment on the new casino, and most who spoke were against it. The city promises more consultation when OLG comes out with a concrete proposal, but for now, Ottawa residents aren't even in the game.

Growers' program comes to fruition. Gardeners expand to an orchard

News worth sharing

Media will always have to report on the tough stuff. But we know that Canada is full of compassionate people, inspiring projects and stories worth celebrating. Here's just one:

At the Orleans Community Garden, wild bunnies nibble on renegade squash growing beyond the fence, but it's The Ottawa Mission that receives the bumper crop.

Five years ago, Gina LaPointe, president of the community garden, introduced the Plant a Row, Grow a Row program to local gardeners.

Compost Council of Canada provided the seeds for two rows of vegetables — one for the gardener and one for donation. The program took root right away. Recently LaPointe tweaked the system, allocating two rows of the same vegetable, and allowing gardeners to plant whatever they wanted and donate the surplus.

The result? "Tons" of food for The Ottawa Mission each week.

"Everyone always has too many tomatoes, too many zucchinis," says LaPointe, who adds that eggplants, ground cherries and hot peppers are all welcome additions to the harvest for the shelter.

Now, these Orleans gardeners are moving from the ground to the trees, having just planted an orchard — its surplus fruit will also be donated.

To pick up seeds and bring the program to your own garden, contact LaPointe at jcog@hotmail.com.

George Stroumboulopoulos' new CNN talk show premiered Sunday night. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Strombo brings style to CNN

Network sea change.

New mandate and management has the purveyor of American news looking to branch out into new territory

It's a safe bet that George Stroumboulopoulos will be the first male CNN personality to wear two earrings and a skull ring from a designer who made one for Keith Richards.

Stroumboulopoulos, whose new nighttime talk show premiered Sunday, is more curious than dangerous, though.

The show gets a solid time slot for its debut, airing after the season finale of Anthony Bourdain's successful Parts Unknown. Then it will settle into a regular spot on Fridays at 11 p.m. Eastern for the summer and, if things go well, maybe beyond.

This is part of CNN's attempt to branch out beyond news programming at certain times, represented most prominently by Bourdain's show. The effort started before the arrival of new network boss Jeff Zucker — Stroumboulopoulos had his first contact with the network last summer before Zucker arrived — but the enthusiasm continued with the change in management.

Stroumboulopoulos already hosts a nightly talk show on the CBC, where his friendly style seems to encourage celebrities to open up.

"I hope that people pick up something new about the person I'm interviewing and find out a way to relate to them," he said. "I want them to find a connection."

For CNN, the show represents an old style for a new generation. Stroumboulopoulos, 40, said his interest in politics was fuelled less by politicians than by listening to the Clash and Public Enemy. He's eager to interview Snoop Lion, the former Snoop Dogg, on his show because he considers him such an important figure in hip-hop.

Rap artist Wiz Khalifa, comic Martin Short and actor Keanu Reeves were the guests on his first show.

Other confirmed interviews for the show's 10-week run include Betty White, Bill Maher, Sharon Stone and filmmaker Werner Herzog.

The show will tape before a studio audience in Los Angeles. Stroumboulopoulos said he's not gunning for the job of CNN's other general interview program, Piers Morgan, and said he likes the way Morgan conducts interviews.

For the moment, he'll fit the CNN show in with a schedule that includes the CBC show (which airs twice in the evening) and a weekly music and talk program he does for a CBS radio station.

"This is what I do," he said. "I don't even have any dependents in my life. I don't even have a plant."

Archie film in works

Betting on the big screen. The iconic comic characters are poised to get a real-life makeover

Archie's old Riverdale gang is headed to the big screen.

Warner Bros. will produce a live-action film based on the comic's characters, including Archie, Betty, Veronica and Jughead, Archie Comics announced.

It will be the first feature film for the 72-year-old comic.

Directing will be Jason Moore, who helmed the 2012 high school musical comedy Pitch Perfect. Glee writer Roberto Aguirre-Sacasa is penning the script.

In an interview Thursday, Aguirre-Sacasa said the present-day film will be "a quintessential teen movie."

"The idea for this is to capture a very truthful, authentic coming-of-age story with these kids that includes heartache, that includes pain, that will obviously temper the fun and the hijinks," said

Aguirre-Sacasa.

"It's going to be a fun — hopefully — summer movie, but we're not shying away from the truth and the awkwardness and the growing pains of being a teenager."

The Archie comics have previously spawned several animated TV series since the 1960s. In 1990, NBC aired the TV film Archie: To Riverdale and Back Again.

"There are parts of the story that I think people will be surprised how dark and real it gets," says Aguirre-Sacasa.

Aguirre-Sacasa's weird past with Archie

Aguirre-Sacasa has an interesting history with Archie Comics. One of his first plays, originally titled Archie's Weird Fantasy, was about Archie coming out of the closet. After legal action was threatened, the Atlanta production was changed to Weird Comic Book Fantasy with the characters' names changed. Aguirre-Sacasa is now on better terms with Archie Comics.

What's in a name? A lot of money, apparently

Scarlett Johansson is suing over the use of her name in The First Thing We Look At, a French novel by Gregoire Delacourt, according to the Hollywood Reporter.

The book features a character first believed to be Johansson until it is later revealed she is a look-alike.

Johansson is seeking compensation and damages for "breach and fraudulent use of personal rights," and she's also seeking a ban on "future transfer of rights and adaptations of the book."

Delacourt, for his part, is "stunned" by the suit and says he chose Johansson for the story because she is the "epitome of beauty today."

Emma Watson

Watson not walking away

Emma Watson says she nearly gave up on show business after finishing up the Harry Potter series.

"I basically took two years out and stepped as far away from it as I could," she tells Justin Bieber's neighbours in his gated community are reportedly fed up with his bad behaviour. They plan to have their servants picket his house and throw old gold at his cars.

A distraught Demi Moore is getting advice from an astrologer about her divorce from Ashton Kutcher. The astrologer told her that, seeing as Aries is rising in the Sun of late February, Demi should perhaps get some real help.

Benicio del Toro joins Marvel's Guardians Of The Universe. He will play an alien superhero whose secret power is to be really ugly and yet, undeniably, smoking hot.

Some source says that while Katy Perry and John Mayer are back together, they're "not putting a label on it." But only because they can't agree whether to go with "may contain certain heartbreak" or "expires as soon as someone more famous is available."

Taylor Swift is reportedly building a "special bedroom" for her touring partner Ed Sheeran in her mansion. Which explains the sad whimpers coming from the basement where she's keeping him until the room is finished.

Welcoming your kids to the wheel world

YummyMummyClub.ca CEO and avid Cadbury Bicycle Factory supporter Erica Ehm speaks to the unexpected education one can acquire on a bicycle.

What can young ones learn from getting on a bicycle for the first time this summer?

The first bike ride is a real bonding moment between parent and child. It's really their first big opportunity for independence. It's a very special moment. It can be tough for them at first — but it teaches persistence and fitness. It's a very important message to instill in your kids, that it's important to go out and play. METRO

In Africa, bicycles have a profound impact on students' lives. A bike can cut travel time to school by up to four hours a day.

Want to be healthier? Juggle a family and a full-time job

New study. Our expert weighs in on a report claiming moms who work outside the home enjoy better mental and physical health

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth,
kathybuckworth.com

A recent survey found women who worked full time outside the home after having children had better mental and physical health by age 40 than those who had not.

This has of course raised interest, as one might assume that working full time while managing a family would be more stressful, and stress is a known factor in contributing to mental and physical challenges.

It would appear that this isn't necessarily accurate. Why would this be?

Personally, I'm not entirely surprised by the findings. I think Albert Einstein had stay-at-home moms in mind when he defined the word "insanity" as "doing the same thing over

Women who have kids and work full time have been found to have better mental and physical health by 40. ISTOCK and over again and expecting different results."

Have you ever been at home with young children? Have you tried to get them to clean up their rooms, pee into the toilet or stop hitting their sister?

No matter how many times they are told (clearly it is not "nagging" when it is simply giving them excellent advice), the outcome is often the same.

Nothing changes. At least not immediately, and not without years of bribing and threats.

Add to that the fact that my research (I drove around a bit) shows that there isn't a big list moms can carpool to at the end of the day in order to check off: a) continued successfully raising child, b) ensured food was edible and in good portion size and c) minimum health standards were met.

Many moms at home just don't get to feel that sense of accomplishment that comes with actually moving something forward and affecting change. Not in the short term, at any rate, and one of the most distressing things a parent of young children can hear from parents of older children is that it "never gets easy."

There's no such thing as a performance review when you're on the home front: except for the ones you get from snarly teenage girls who aren't necessarily focusing on your positive attributes, as the ones in a professional work environment might. Unless, "You suck" is now a good thing in the way that "that's so sick" has become. (I do try.)

The reward system for moms at home also leaves something to be desired. In that there really isn't one, except for the playground high fives you exchange with a friend when your kid wasn't the one kicking someone else off the slide.

Compare this to the workplace, where most employees can expect to be treated with a modicum of respect, have performance reviews which don't include door slamming (to be fair, there aren't any doors in most cubicles), and best of all, they get to take on new responsibilities with the positive achievement of old ones.

Being relieved at duties you've perfected is something moms at home never get to experience. Until the kids are the ones to leave home, that is. KATHY'S NEW BOOK I AM SO THE BOSS OF YOU: AN 8 STEP GUIDE TO GIVING YOUR FAMILY THE BUSINESS IS AVAILABLE AT BOOKSTORES EVERYWHERE. Preventing unplanned pregnancy at any age

LINDA CLARKE

Metro World News in New York

There are around three million unplanned pregnancies every year in the U.S., and though it's an issue often associated with teenagers, a proportion of women this happens to are older, and some are married.

So, Dr. Hilda Hutcherson, a Columbia University Medical Center professor of clinical Obstetrics and Gynecology, gives us a refresher course on our options for making sure a baby doesn't catch us by surprise.

Birth control pills

You can still take them well past your teen years, Hutcherson says. "It's a safe option for women of all ages. Initially, when it was first passed, it was recommended for women until age 30, then it was age 35, but now most women can safely use it right into their 40s until they reach menopause."

Condoms

"Condoms work great if people use them consistently and right from the beginning of intercourse. The female condom is wonderful. I thought it was going to be popular, but it's large and makes slurping noises during sex. The newer ones are less noisy, but it's not caught on."

They're convenient and have undergone major improvements, Hutcherson says. "Women stopped using IUDs because of infections, which caused infertility. But modern ones are smaller and improved. Even young women who haven't had children can use them."

The morning-after-pill

"This should only be used in emergencies and not relied on as a form of contraception," Hutcherson says.

Cover and refrigerate for at least 3 hours to allow the flavours to develop. The dressing keeps for up to 2 weeks in the refrigerator.

- 1/2 tsp red pepper flakes
- 1 lb raw large shrimp, peeled
- 2 ears corn, husked
- 10-oz container cocktail (small) tomatoes
- Olive oil
- Ground black pepper
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- Zest of 1 orange
- 8 slices of baguette
- 1 jicama, peeled and diced
- 1 avocado, pitted, peeled and diced
- Juice of 2 limes
- 1 bunch cilantro, roughly chopped
- 4 oz soft goat cheese

3. Arrange the corn and tomatoes on a rimmed baking sheet and drizzle with olive oil. Sprinkle with salt and black pepper.

4. In bowl, stir garlic, orange zest and 2 tablespoons of olive oil. Brush over both sides of each slice of baguette.

5. Arrange shrimp, ears of corn, and tomatoes on the grill and cook until shrimp are cooked through and pink and the corn and tomatoes are beginning to char. Add the baguette slices and grill until lightly charred. Transfer to a platter and allow to cool slightly.

6. Meanwhile, in a large bowl, toss together the jicama, avocado and lime juice.

7. Slice corn kernels off cobs. To do this, one at a time stand each ear on its wide end and use a knife to saw down length of the cob. Add the kernels to the jicama-avocado mixture. Add the tomatoes, shrimp and cilantro. Stir gently. Crumble the goat cheese over the top and serve with the toasted bread. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don't bring the beach to your business: Shedding light on sunny-season attire

Who wears short-shorts? Perhaps you do on your off-time, but try to be mindful of making your co-workers uncomfortable

MARY
Metro World News

It's finally summer, that sweet time of year when we get to shake off our winter doldrums and shed the extra layers of clothing we've been bundled in for the past six months. But though the long, hazy days ahead are synonymous with relaxation, this doesn't necessarily translate to your work wardrobe. It may be beach weather out there, but that doesn't mean you can start showing up to the office looking like you're headed to the shore. We asked four style experts in Boston to weigh in on the summer staples that are appropriate for the workplace and those you should save for those weekend seaside jaunts.

Do: Coloured jeans

While jeans are typically seen as a "Friday only" look, a pair with a pop of colour is a great way to show off your personality. The right coloured jeans definitely do work at the office, says Dani McDonald, owner of Flock. "It's a great way to incorporate the colours of the season into your work attire," says McDonald. For a dressier look, McDonald recommends pairing your jeans with a silk blouse or a well-pressed shirt — with collar unbuttoned at top.

If your office is in the sand, dress in whatever duds you'd like. But chances are you've got people around you. Keep it professional! ISTOCK

Do: Florals

Think a fun floral print is too youthful for the office? Think again! "Floral (dresses) are on trend and work perfect for the office," says Ann Dingwell, owner of Turtle.

As long as the dress is the proper length, and not too low-cut, they're an office do, says Dingwell. To keep warm in AC blasted offices, Dingwell recommends pairing dresses with a jacket or lightweight cashmere cardigan. Guys may want to add a pop of colour with a floral tie design, perhaps a nice paisley.

Don't: Maxi dresses

While long, flowing maxi dresses are both incredibly comfortable and versatile enough for most occasions, they don't pass for professional office attire.

"Maxi dresses tend to (either) be a little too casual (think beach wear or bathing suit cover ups) or too dressy for a formal work environment," says Pam Santorelli, owner of Habit.

Santorelli recommends saving the maxis for the weekends, when you can dress them up — or down — as needed.

Do: Tank tops and T-shirts

Gone are the days when baring shoulders at the office was a no-no. Tank tops are great layering pieces for work, just remember to save the rib-knit tanks for the gym. "Tank tops in the office are a do if they're dressy," says McDonald.

To keep the look work appropriate, McDonald suggests something structured, like a peplum tank, paired with a skirt.

Guys may want to avoid a printed T-shirt, but a solid-coloured or patterned T worn with a cardigan or sports jacket offers a light and fresh look.

Summer rules

Our experts also tell us that...

- If you're wearing open-toed shoes or sandals, a pedicure is a must, says Dingwell.
- You should invest in a good strapless bra. Bra straps, especially plastic, shouldn't be seen, says Benson.
- Lightweight dresses can be a little sheer, so wear a slip, says Santorelli.
- If you're not a fan of denim, then coloured khakis are a great option, says Benson.

Don't: Shorts

While shorts can exude a preppy confidence, Emily Benson, founder and owner of The Fashion Truck, a mobile fashion boutique, recommends steering clear of them.

"There are few occasions and few styles of shorts that actually work for a business setting," says Benson. So when it's 90 degrees out there and pants just won't do, go for a dress.

Don't: Flip-Flops

While these casual sandals are many people's go-to footwear on a swelteringly hot day, flip-flopping your way to your desk won't win you any marks at the office. Flip-flops should be worn only at the beach, says Benson.

Guys, this goes for you too.

From page to prosperity: Get ahead with a good book

Whether you've just finished another year at school or are fully immersed in a full-time job, we beckon you to spend at least some time this summer at the beach, cottage, campground or park buried in some wonderful books. Read and enjoy — or challenge — any of these picks, just make sure you take some time to dust off your library card and pick through some pages this summer.

What The CEO Wants You To Know

By Ram Charan

The draw

This book provides the new grad with a comprehensive overview of business concepts in an easy-reading style, and presents you with all of the key business knowledge you should have when you first jump into the work force.

The take away

Your take aways from this book will vary depending on your own personal background. A business major may find it simplistic, but pretty much everyone else will find value in the comprehensive information that is presented in the book, and be able to apply that knowledge to improve their own understanding of personal performance.

Getting Things Done

By David Allen

The draw

In Getting Things Done, Allen outlines concrete methods for time management that will allow you to increase your productivity through easy-to-follow process maps and methods that are not complicated to implement but which will make big changes to your productivity.

The take away

Allen argues that by following a structured system of organization, you can clear your mind of the stress that continually pops up from incomplete items and focus better on the work at hand. This improves both your ability to complete work on time and also work on a more engaged and productive level.

How To be Exceptional

By various authors

The draw

How To Be Exceptional is on this list because it presents a compelling leadership development method that runs counter to much of the information that is currently prevailing in the business world. Although it's geared toward leaders, it's also applicable for new grads.

The take away

This book will highlight for you the importance of magnifying your strengths by introducing the concept of cross-training in order for you to develop similar competencies to the skills you already do well.

The 7 Habits Of Highly Effective People

By Stephen R. Covey

The draw

The 7 Habits Of Highly Effective People is a book that presents real, concrete concepts (with only a dash or two of the new-age, hippie stuff) that you can utilize to increase your effectiveness in your role.

The take away

This is not a book you read once and put away; it's a reference guide as much as it is anything. Much of the benefit comes from continually reviewing the key principles set forth in the book and ensuring you're on track. For new grads and students, The 7 Habits can lay the groundwork for working through so many of the issues you will encounter during your career and sets the stage for becoming a successful, effective leader.

Kicking it off once the cap comes off

The parties, the pictures, and now, a profession? How to get your game face on after graduation

For post-secondary graduates receiving degrees and diplomas in the weeks ahead, excitement over completing their programs may be tempered by the grim job landscape for Canada's young people.

The latest labour force survey from Statistics Canada revealed a decline of 19,000 jobs for youth aged 15 to 24 in April. The youth unemployment rate was at 14.5 per cent last month, little changed compared to a year earlier and more than double the national average. "When you see numbers like that, it can often give you the impression there really aren't many jobs available in your area," said Shirin Khamisa, a Toronto-based career counselor and founder of Careers by Design.

"Be very realistic and realize there is a general climate where there are less jobs, but that doesn't mean you won't be able to secure a job that's right for you."

Khamisa and other experts share three ways for job-seeking grads to distinguish themselves in a competitive job market and work toward kick-starting their careers.

Build a network

Do you have any professional contacts in your area of study or field of expertise? If not, there's no time like the present to start making connections. Attending industry events, joining a professional umbrella organization or engaging with individuals working in the field to ask about key needs in their area — and how you can fill them — could help build your network, said Khamisa.

"That's the really powerful thing in a job search when it's a tighter market — to get that face time with people who are in the field you'd like to work in."

Another good way to obtain information and build a network is through informal interviews, said Bruno Castilloux, manager of career services at the University of Ottawa.

He suggested researching the company of interest to craft precise questions before calling to speak briefly with a representative to learn more.

Keep connected

While many people will be keen to "jump right into job-search mode," Khamisa said that's not the best way to start a relationship with a potential contact. Khamisa said the job search should be a time of exploration. It's often easier when individuals are initially seeking out information and learning about a particular industry and the needs of an organization before hunting for a specific position, she noted. "Reaching out and connecting takes courage ... and I guarantee you there will be times where people don't get back to you or are just too busy or aren't receptive," she said.

"But the magic happens when you persevere and you keep going. And eventually, you will connect with a group of people who will help you and

Go digital

- Many organizations use social networking sites like LinkedIn for recruitment purposes, but Khamisa said establishing an online profile can offer added benefits.

- Beyond fostering connections, job seekers can be exposed to professional groups who convene online, she noted.

- In many fields, social media and other tech-related skills are becoming increasingly necessary for doing an effective job and working efficiently, Khamisa said.

- She recommended observing how others in the field are making use of digital tools as a key first step. Bragge said those with an existing online presence — such as a Facebook page — should ensure that they "clean up" their social media profiles because prospective bosses could be watching.

support you as you move forward." Khamisa added she once had a client who developed 10 contacts through cold calling. She continued to keep in touch over several months and ended up getting three different job offers. Placing a phone call isn't just limited to maintaining professional contacts.

When individuals reach the stage where they're submitting applications, a followup call is another way to show initiative, said Danielle Bragge, a partner with The Headhunters, a Canadian recruitment firm. It doesn't have to be aggressive. The process can be as simple as an introduction, mentioning your interest in the opportunity you've applied for and highlighting three quick reasons you'd make a great addition to the team, Bragge said.

Blue Jays blow gasket with chance to break out brooms

MLB. With game and series sweep there for the taking, Toronto's Bautista loses cool as Rangers salvage finale

The Texas Rangers used the long ball to get in position for a comeback win on Sunday.

A lack of focus from Toronto slugger Jose Bautista in a big ninth-inning situation helped them seal the victory.

Nelson Cruz, David Murphy and Adrian Beltre homered as the Rangers scored six unanswered runs in a 6-4 victory over the Blue Jays at Rogers Centre. Texas (37-25) salvaged the finale of the three-game series and ended Toronto's three-game winning streak.

The Blue Jays (27-35) had the potential winning run at second base with one out in the ninth and Bautista at the plate.

The Toronto slugger didn't like a called strike by umpire Gary Darling and it appeared to rattle him for the rest of the at-bat. When Bautista struck out, he jawed with the umpire and was ejected from the game.

Bautista has never been shy in voicing displeasure with umpire calls. Manager John Gibbons said he's not concerned that his slugger might be getting a reputation.

"It doesn't help him, that's for sure," Gibbons said. "But it really hasn't been a problem this year. Today it kind of blew up but look over the season, it really hasn't been an issue. So we've just got to move on."

Bautista declined to speak with reporters after the game.

Rangers closer Joe Nathan got Edwin Encarnacion to pop up to end the game.

"We're going through some tough times but nobody's going to feel sorry for us," Encarnacion said. "We have to find a way to get wins."

Toronto looked to be on its way to a series sweep after Adam Lind hit a three-run homer in the Jays' four-run third inning. But the Rangers chipped away at starter Josh Johnson and trailed by just a run after five innings.

Rafa lays claim as the only man with eight titles at any Grand Slam tournament

If Rafael Nadal truly was going to be challenged, if his bid for an unprecedented eighth French Open championship would be slowed even a bit, this might have been the moment.

The last was a 31-stroke exchange, the match's longest, capped when Nadal absorbed Ferrer's strong backhand approach and transformed it into a cross-court backhand passing shot.

Formula One. Vettel easily cruises to first win at Canadian Grand Prix

Sebastian Vettel wasn't losing any sleep over never having won the Canadian Grand Prix, but when he finally did it, he did it in style.

The triple world champion for the Red Bull team pulled out to a comfortable lead from pole position and was never threatened as he added the Canadian GP to his list of 29 career Formula One wins on Sunday afternoon.

The German, who has a commanding 36-point lead in drivers standings, took the checkered flag 14.4 seconds ahead of Ferrari ace Fernando Alonso, his closer pursuer on the track and in the standings.

"It is important to us, but I wasn't desperate to win here," said Vettel. "I think we had strong results in the past."

"It wasn't a shame coming in here not having won this race, so I wasn't desperate when I got up this morning, thinking 'I have to win, I have to win.' But I was very pleased because it's a very

You may prefer to stick with what you know and trust today rather than take a risk on something new. That's up to you, of course, but it's also a shame because a little bit of courage could change your life completely.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Keep telling yourself that the changes now taking place are not nearly as bad as some people claim. As a matter of fact they could actually be beneficial, for you anyway, so make sure you have a positive attitude.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You are not as conformist as some people think and what you do over the next few days will prove that fact several times over. Expect a bit of a backlash though.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Try not to give too much away today, especially on the work front where knowledge is most definitely power. The less others know about what you are up to the more likely it is your efforts will be a success.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

For some reason you are a bit more aggressive than usual, which could lead to confrontations at home and at work.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

It's time to get serious about your long-term aims and that means, inevitably, getting rid of certain short-term aims that eat up your time and your energy.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The planets will smooth your path as the new week begins and you will find it quite easy to get your way both in the professional sphere and in your private affairs.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Try not to let little things annoy you today because if your temper gets the better of you there is no telling where it might lead. Whatever other people might say or do treat it all as a big joke.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

If a commitment of some sort is not working out then maybe you should cut your losses and get out. It won't be easy but let common sense (and the contents of your wallet) guide you.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Some things can be put off indefinitely because they are not really important but you have been putting off something that MUST be forced through to a conclusion. Make this the week when you finally crack it.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Yes, all things are possible but don't get silly and change things for the sake of it today — chances are you will just have to change them back again later. SALLY BROMPTON
